“ Tony and I were best friends for a while in middle school and highschool. We used to hang out at each other's houses constantly. We lost touch somewhere along the way and I just found out about his passing. I have so many memories of hanging out, button mashing on Wrestling games on PS2 or rampaging on GTA3. I don't know how many times we stayed up super late talking about ridiculous things only we could think of.
Rest in peace brother.

“ Anthony was the leader of my guild on Dragon soul (where we knew him as TsSlakers). I never met him in person but he was an awesome leader. He knew how to lift peoples spirits and was always giving us laughs with his constant avatar name changes. He never shied away from standing up for what he believed in. So sad to hear of his passing. When I looked at the guild members list it will let you know when someone was last online, Ts was on everyday so seeing "3 days since last online" makes my heart break. Rest in peace Tony.

Tony.. you'll always be missed. Although we didn't talk much in the game, I've always felt that we had a special connection. I'll always treasure the conversations that we had. Can't believe I won't talk to you again. It breaks my heart, Tony. You'll never be forgotten.

“ When ever my husband and I would go to Chris' house Tony was usually there and we would end up playing poker. No matter what kind of poker it was Tony seemed to win every time but every time we would still waste our pennies trying to beat him. We could play go fish and Tony would have won. My husband always said he cheated at poker but he always claimed he was just lucky. We never found out if he actually cheated or not but really it didn't matter because we played against him every time because it was the thrill of maybe he will lose this time. It's been years since we've seen Tony but our hearts go out to his family and friends who were close to him.

“ Jesus idk where to begin. Tony was the first real friend I had. When my dad moved into a new place when I was about 5 I remember riding my bike around the block and I saw Tony and a bunch of kids playing outside his house so I stopped over because I recognized him from class and he had one of the street shark toys and I had just gotten one. From that point on we hungout nonstop, whether it was playing video games (Tony loved donkey kong country) or riding bikes or playing with toys. When we learned how to write Tony and I had really shitty handwriting so we were given special paper that was larger and bigger lines so it was easier for us to work on our penmanship, last i remember we both still had shitty handwriting haha. We also shared the same birthday and when I was 6 I forgot my birthday and I think my mom did too and I saw Tony bringing in treats for everyone and he asked where mine were and told me it was my birthday lol. We grew apart as we got older but would still run into eachother from time to time and it would be like as if nothing had changed. We had a group of friends in jr high that would all meet up and play football. In highschool we had a few classes together and all the classes we had we would work together on everything, maybe it stemmed back from our childhood that we were always a good team. After we graduated High School we completely lost touch but every now and then i would try find him on social media, I feel guilty losing touch with Tony over the years, he was such a genuine person and always a character haha. He will be greatly missed by anyone who had the pleasure of calling him a friend or family.
