“ We are really going to miss Austin. The construction work really turned him into a man, but the real man in him was the part that was so selfless and humble. All that he gave up to help and support his family, while taking very little for himself. There is a place in heaven for him. See you when we get there, goodbye Austin...your in our hearts aand minds. David Kent and Angie Keller.

“ Happy you moved back to Illinois and my kids got to know you man... Too many memories to list but I'll leave the last one we laughed about.... Being kid with a curfew and using our paper bags as a way to go out and ride bikes all night on Saturdays without getting caught by the police for curfew... We were good at figuring out how much trouble we could get in to without being caught!

Mom was talking today about Austin hitting you in the head with a golf club when we lived in Bourbonnais.
