“ It’s hard to pick just one memory of my grandpa. He is more complex than that. As a kid, I remember him watching football, NASCAR, and mowing the lawn. To be honest, that stayed true for a very long time. No one ever cut his lawn as well as he did. But I also cannot forget seeing photo of my grandpa at Disney with Meagan’s doll. Because as much as he was the only person that could cut his lawn right, he was also the grandfather that was absolutely able to do anything for his family, even carry a babydoll around for his granddaughter.

My most recent memory is of him singing the National Anthem this year along to the tv as a football game was about to start. Just a few years earlier I recall him asking me about my job and programs we offer to help homeless Veterans, opening up a big piece of who my grandpa is.

Finally, I remember sitting next to him at my mom and dad’s house when he made a comment about how good my grandma looked. And how lucky he was.
