“ Goldie was my great aunt. She was the first fashion icon I ever knew, and she was a fabulous diva. I remember having sleepovers with her at her house, and I felt like I was in a wonderful antique shop. She had the coolest trinkets and pictures. She let me paint her nails, she taught me how to blot lipstick to make it less intense and off your teeth.

There was an old well pump in her yard, and she laughed as I played with it as a kid. I remember surprising her at Donna's, and her showing me around the store and leading me into the secret employee sections. She dressed me up like a doll and let me try her wine when I was young. She smelled good and she was always sparkly and glam. I never saw her not wearing kitten heels and slacks. She always had a perm, and she loved to gossip. When I was little, she had a dog named Muffin that I thought was beautiful.

She was an amazing cook, and she loved to host parties and feasts and her house was always lively and warm during the holidays. She was a meticulous gift wrapper and her gifts always felt like little treasures. She loved lemons and olive oil, and she claimed that's how she always kept a youthful appearance and lived to be so old.

I miss her dearly, and I will always remember her. I'm glad she's at peace and reunited with her family that passed before her. <3
