“ I used to take care of her when she lived at Butterfield Court. I loved her. She was a joy to be with. We shared many laughs. She was my favorite lady (as I called her). Sometimes another girl would get her up and Helen didn't want to, she would get me to get Helen up. I never had any trouble with her. I would wake her up saying, "Good morning sunshine." And that would put a smile on her face. When I found out she had left to live somewhere else, I was very sad. Helen, you may not remember me, but I will ALWAYS remember you. Thank you for all the joy you put into my heart. You are in God's hands now. I will miss you.##imported-begin##Katherine Vahl##imported-end##
