“ The pictures in the posts below show the Joe I remember from high school days. He was a fun loving jokester that was always fun to be around. Nearly twenty years ago we were planning our class reunion. Shortly afterwards I was going through a rough time in my life and needed to get two mortgages on homes I owned. I went to see Joe at Homestar. I asked, Joe can I get two mortgages on the two homes that I own, at my age? Joe's quit wit responded, "hell Mac, last week I gave a 30 year mortgage to an 80 year old." He completely put me at ease throughout the process.

God Bless, Joe
Keep the jokes rolling until we meet again.

“ Not much to say.
Joe was a great guy. With an awesome personality.
My wife and I met Joe in 2004. When we moved down to the Limestone area. From the western burbs.
So we could be closer to my wifes family.
Joe was our loan officer thru Homestar.
But, Joe was much more than just our bank connection. He was a friend.
My he forever live in the hearts of all who knew him.
Enjoy your nap my friend.

“ Joe was my neighbor for many years. I assisted in residing his house and while doing this I discovered I had the widow maker and ended up having open heart in 97. I remember not having enough strength to pull the siding up and he said "oh come on suck it up" we got a kick out of that a few years later when he asked me remember that pain you had before your surgery what did it feel like? I told him when you get it you'll know it. Well he never got that pain eventhough he would ride his bike around the neighborhood because he was worried. Well buddy you had different pain and you fought like a true Warrior. Rest Easy Now Joe Ypu Earned It.

“ I worked with Joe at First of America and loved seeing his smiling face. Later he helped us with mortgage loans at Homestar Bank. All I had to do was pick up the phone and he was there for us. He was the BEST!! You said it all in his obituary, "he was an old friend to everyone he met." Mama Cino

“ We were probably one of the many families that Joe assisted with a home mortgage- what a great guy! We bonded over our love of Chicago sports and he was so helpful to us as first time home buyers at the time. He was such a kind and helpful guy. We will be praying for your family in the days ahead.
