“ There were many nights after I got back from Iraq that I would spend playing games and talking. He would often just listen and never compared what I went through with something he experienced. Justin was one of the only people that I confided in. We often messaged each other to keep in touch when I was not reaching out to anyone. As children we often did stupid things together then came up with even dumber reasons to tell our parents why we did what we did. He will be missed so much. I no longer have you to talk to Justin. I love you and everyday you will be missed.
