“ I was out of town and only just read of Mrs. Regan?s passing. I½I remember I½riding out to her house with my Dad, I½who was one of the Democratic precinct I½captains I½during the 80s and 90s, I½to bring her a carload of political signs and flyers. We joked she was ?the only Democrat I½in Peotone,? but she always I½put the signs up. They stood in her yard double daring passersby to kick them over. If they did, I½she?d stand them right back up. She and my dad would I½always stop on the stoop and commiserate about I½politics and the ways of the world in what was sometimes a lonely battle. But neither I½one ever stopped hoping and fighting to win the next one. I like to think this last election, I½at least, gave her a good send off. I½But I?ll miss the idea of her signs standing there, I½resolute, I½taunting the rest of the block.##imported-begin##marcy marzuki##imported-end##
