“ Nancy was very quiet, gentle, and often shy. She had a good sense of humor and she loved animals, especially dogs. Her Katie will be lost without her. She was also very creative and enjoyed crafting. She had immeasurable patience working on intricate cross stitchings, sewing on sequins, and painting. She was a avid reader who would stay up half the night to read "just one more chapter". Nancy also loved decorating her home for all the different seasons and holidays. She strived to make her home "homey" and did it quite well. Family was of utmost importance to her. Even though she had been in pain and was so tired for quite sometime, seldom did she complain or dwell on it. Once in a while she'd become so frustrated because she was no longer able to do what she once had done and still longed to do, but complaining was not in her nature. She was a remarkable person who was loved very much and I will greatly miss her. Love, Ruth
