“ this is the first time being in here since I found out about her death when someone told me about it,,,so I'm sorry I didn't get to this way sooner. Robin was my bestest friend,,we grew up together and she was the only one that stuck with me through thick and thin. I took it really hard when I found out she died,,,though I was expecting it,,,she did say she was dying I just didn't want to believe it. When she was going to do something she would do it and not alot stopped her. She also stood for what was right and also herself,,,she didn't let anybody take advantage of her. She knew how to have fun and knew when to be serious. I remember one night we were at her house and it was time for me to go home,,,her hallway was pitch black dark,,,I was trying to find the light switch along the walls and I couldn't find it,,,I thought I had to turn the corner turning right and going to the front door and all I ended up doing walking right into the wall hard,,I couldn't see,,,I hurt so bad I went back to her room and cried my eyes out swearing up and down it was broke,,,but knowing I had to get home I toughed it out and went home and found out later my nose was jammed,,,lol,,,that's what I get for walking into walls,,lol. I miss you Robin. I wish you were still here.
